J'lem still suspicious of U.S. on autonomy

By DAVID LANDAU Post Diplomatic Correspondent A legalistic flap between Israel ind the U.S. over the definition of "imerica's "role" in the autonomy alks heing held with Egypt seems to ave come to a happy end, with sraal yesterday weicoming 'clarifications'' received from Vashington over the weekend. But eneath the resolved iegalism, a leep sensa of suspicion still per-entions in the autonomy talks. Top policymakers still fear that he U.S. intends to dominate the realks and put forward proposals of ts own that might be more far-eaching (l.e. more pro-Palestinian) han Egyptian demands would be. Ministers Ezer Weizman and Ariel haron have warned publicly that Washington might be tougher than lairo in the talks. It now appears hat thair views are shared by many ther policymakers.

Two theories, not mutually exciusive, are cited to explain that Israeli trepldations: The U.S., desperately anxious to woo Saudi Arabia and the other conservative Arah states, will want to "iemonstrate that it — and not Egypt - is in effect controlling the "autonomy talks. Washington is seen as more anxious even than Cairo to soften Saudi opposition to the Camp David framework.

The U.S. will be working in landem with Egypt. The Egyptians, conscious of the doubts about the "" peace that affect significant sections "-" of Israsil public opinion, would prefer to have the U.S. put forward the demands that are unpalatable to "Israsi - thus diverting the Israeli "After all," said an advocate of this second theory last night, "it is not the U.S. that is walting to get back a part of California"

... Ons Israell source pointed to the dispute over the chairmanship of the autonomy talks as indicating, in the light of hindsight, the extent of U.S.-Egyptian collaboration.

The Egyptians knew for weeks before the opening sassion, at Beersheba on April 25, that Israel's Interior Minister Yosef Burg proposed to chair the meeting. But at the last moment the source recalled, Fremier Mustapha Khalil refused to come unless U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was in the chair.

The dispute over the chairmanship continued at Alexandria last week. Once again the Egyptians claimed that Khalil could not attend future eetings in israel of for protocular reasons. But protocol was only a pretext the Israeli source asserted, Egypt'a real intention was to install the U.S. thief delegate as chairman of the conference - and thus enable the I.S. to assume an active role right rom the outset. (The U.S. is to be represented at a neeting of "experts" tomorrow by David Korn, chief of the State Department's Israei desk. The neeting, to be heid at Herzliya will ittempt in make progress on the igenda for the talks. Foreign Ministry iegal adviser Meir Rosenne vill appear for Israel. The Egyptian ielegate is not yet known.) The legal wrangle over the U.S. ole, which erupted at Alexandria, effected, in fact, the Israeli anxetlee over American and Egyptian lesigns. No sooner did Egyptian dinister of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghall epeak of the U.S. as a party" in the talks, than Israel's oreign Minister Moshe Dayan ahot ack that this was not what was greed at Camp David. Ghail said the U.S. must not only sarticipate fully in the negotiations ut also sign the eventual agreement is a "party" (some Israeli paricipants say be did not spell this out; thers Inelst that he did), and taka part in the implementation including the supervision of the withdrawal of Israsil armed orces... The envisaged U.S. role in the 'implementation'' was sean hy srael ee particularly ominoue. Ibail relied on a provision in Camp David which reads: "The U.S. shall se invited to participate in the talks in matters related to the modalities of the implementation of the tgreements....' But leraai countered that this phrase gave the J.S. a role in "talks on implemenation" not in "implementation" tself.

VOL. XLIX, No. 14844 U.S. urges long-term stability in USSR talks

VIENNA (Reuter). - U.S. President Jimmy Carter, with an eye on the future leaders of the Soviet Union, yesterday urged 72-year-old Kremlin chief Leonid Brezhnev to consider long-term ideas for assuring world stability in an increasingly dangerous nuclear age. Minutes after Carter's statement, the ailing Breshnev stumbled on the steps of the Soviet embassy and was saved from a possible fall when Carter rushed to his side and gripped his shoulder to steady him. Soviet and American secret ser need for long-term thinking about maintaining peace and stability in view of the growing complexity of nuclear weapon systems that might run out of control. U.S. officials refused to discuss

The Post goes to the beach-part 3 Two towns take beaches seriously

By HAIM SHAPIRO Jerusalem Post Reporter

Two towns that seem to take their responsibility of caring for the beaches seriously are Herzliya and Netanya. The sceptic might argue that both depend on tourism, but other municipalities also have tourists and don't jock after their beaches.

Nelanya: free, clean, Htile tar, changing rooms, shade. deck chairs IL5, showers, kiosk. From the scope of facilities available at the main beach area, the casual observer might imagine that there is a charge. In fact, the beach is free. For IL10 one can change and abower in a private cubicle and have an attendant watch one's clothes. The ILS charge for chairs is half of that isvied at other beaches, although there is also a IL5 deposit, refundable when the chair is returned. Lots of shade umbrellas are available for those wishing to keep out of the sun. The water in the large coves forming the bathing areas is calm and very clean. In fact, Netanya seemed a perfect place to spend a day at the beach.

There were quite a faw paddle-ball players despite the eigns forhidding such activities in the bathing area, but many of the players were foreign tourists who seemed in very much enjoy this largell beach distraction.

If one tried to find room for complaint, it would be that there are no signs; in Hebrew or any other language, directing the non-resident to the various facilities. From the road and garden above the beach, it is impossible to know where the main changing facilities are located and the facilities themselves are a maze to the uninitiated. Nof Yam: Free, some litler, lar, clear waler, no changing rooms, no showers, little shade, no dock chairs, no restaurant or kiosk.

This is a beach for those who want to rough it; the lack of facilities evidently compensated for hy the long, wide stretch of white sand. Unfortunately, the sand was marred by garbage.

There were plenty of trasb cans on the beach, but the plies of litter near each one made it seem as if they were not emplied before the wind blew their contents away. Asign in the parking iot said "parking IL25," but there was no one to collect it on a weekday afternoon. A very long flight of stairs led down to the aca, past some wreck-

LOD (Itim). - The son of former Hehron Mayor Mohammed All Ja'abari was sentenced yesterday to 12 years in jail by a military court here for aiding the Fatah terrorist organization.

Nur e-Din Ja'ahari, 50, was convicted of membership in the Fatah and of organizing the smuggling of arms, ammunition and sabotage material from Lebanon into Israei. He pleaded not guilty. The court said it was imposing a iesser sentence than cailed for because of the accused's age and physical condition. He is under medical treatment for varioue ilments. The court said Ja'abarl had coliaborated with Yosef Nidam, a Bat Yam Jew who was sentenced to 10 yeare in prison in April for smuggling explosives for an Arab gang that planned to plant a large bomh in Jerusalem's cinema district.

The court also said it was lenient because Ja'abari had argued he was taken prisoner by the Fatah, which be sald had threatened his daughter - a Beirut resident - if he didn't help them as a contact man in the West Bank.

Ja'abarl's father claims friendsbip with Jordan's King Hussein and was defeated for the Hebron mayorality hy Fahd Kawasme during the spring 1976 municipal elections in Judea and Sumaria.

Fatah man met with Egyptians

CAIRO (UPI). - The newspaper "Al-Sivassa" said yesterday that a ranking member of Yasser Arafat's Fatah terrorist group visited Cairo secretly for talks with Egyptian leaders on the proposed autonomy scheme.

The newspaper said Zuheir Ezzed din, code-named Abu Osama, visited Cairo during the past few days. "Ha held intensive talks with Egyptian foreigo ministry officials in convey the viewpoint of some Paiestinian circles regarding the autonomy scheme," the newspaper said. No official confirmation of the report was available inmediately.

Butros Ghail, the Egyptian state minister for foreign affairs, has said repeatedly that Cairo was main-taining contact with the Palestinian Arahs. Terrorist groups have publicly condemned the autonomy negotlatione hetween Egypt and Israsl, which are scheduled to be resumed June 25.

The newspaper's report appeared to imply that privately the Fatah is not opposed to the echeme.

Halaby 'misled' but did not lie about Eilon Moreh-Lapid Xavin and Authority epokeeman Moshe Amirav, both of whom toured the area on Friday for three hours with Tat-Aluf (res.) Uri Bar-On, an aide to Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon. Sharon had claimed in tha Kneeset and in Interviews that Halaby photographed an Arab village's cultivated land and not the Eilon Morch site, which, be insisted.

Monday, June 18, 1979

Yavin wrote in his report to Lapid that about five per cent of the land set aside for the cettlement was planted with olive trees and corn. Amirav (who was a delegate to the recent Herut convention) reported that about one per cent of the land was cultivated. The two also disagreed on the age of the olive trees. Lapid stated that because of Inadequate mapping of the settlement site, it was impossible to locate the exact boundaries of the land that. was seized.

Since Halaby said in the TV report that Eilon Moreb was "the first settisment to bs established on cultivated land," he misled the public into thinking that all the land seized was cultivated, according to Lapid.

In addition, Lapid continued, the cameras did not photograph the uncultivated land that was seized. "It was a mistake, but there is no basis for the serious charge that Halaby lied," Lapld concluded.

After bearing Lapid'e announce-ment on the 5 p.m. radio news, Sharon called the director-general in the middle of the Broadcasting

Authority plenum accesion at the Jerusalem Plaza Hotel and apparently argued about it. ''I'm sorry," Lapid was overheard saying "but there were ollve trees there," During the session, Lapid also die

Alan Elsner adds: Two anonymous phone calls tbreatening Halaby's life were received late Saturday night by two reporters working for the Itim news agency. Voices claiming to represent the "executive arm of Guah Emunim" told the reporters thattheir organization had decided to "liquidate the leftist reporter" for his report on the Ellon Morch settlement. Arabs to recover Eilon Moreh farmland

Cultivated areas on the hill requisitioned for Jewish settlement near Nablus will be returned to its Arab bwnsrs, the coordinator of settlement in Judea and Samaria, Uri Bar-On, told The Jerusalem Post last night.

He cald that the requisition order strictly excludes cultivated areas, and that surveyors will go to Eilon Moreh today to demarcate the area. The initial military government order had requisitioned some 300 dunam, but Bar-On estimated that after the demarcation only 600 dunam will be eeized.

Curiously, the demarcation is to foliow extensive work by bulldozers last week. A dirt road they prepared paseed near email scatterod cultivated plots. The buildocers also knocked down three or four almond trees near a stone fence enclosing an Arab-owned olive and mulberry

^{pid}Labour Kibbutz groups foresee autumn merger

By SRAYA SHAPIRO Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. - The groundwork for the Thud Hakvutzot and Hakibbutz Hameuhad merger is all but finisbed, and a declaration of sime chould be adopted hy this weekend.

Leaders of the two main Labour Party kinbutz bodiee announced yesterday that this paves the way for the founding convention of the Thua Kinbutsit Me'unedet, scheduled for September or October this year. The merger will give the kibbutz movement more power within the party and restore some of the clout it wielded in the 'forties and 'fiftiee.

Ihud Hakvutsot claims a. membership of 41,500 on 85 kibbut-zim, while Hakibbutz Hameuhad has just over 80,000 members on 64 kibbutzim. The new body will thus represent a majority of Israel'e 120,000-strong kibbutz population.

The idea of the merger took root in 1974, according to Moshe Harif, and Aharon Dagan of the Ihud, and MKs Danny Rosolio and Ze'ev Katz, and a'acov Tsur of the Meuhad. to the merger. "But we are sure it will join one day, that's why we want to call the new organization the Uniled Kibbuts Movement, so there is no need to change the appelation again," a spokesman for the merging sides said.

The movement will endeavour to sliminate hired labour from the kibbutzim, possibly by turning over industrial enterprises which require ontside workers to regional rganizations.

Settlement momentum will be enhanced, but only within the "Allon pian" area, namely the Jordan Valley, Golan Heights, Galilee and the Arava. But kibbutz spokesmen complained that the government was withholding funds for these settlements, "as the money is used to establish footholds in Judea and Samaria."

The kibbuizim, Rosolio said, want a settlement programme wblcb would assure territorial continuity between them, with the view that autonomy, whatever it may mean, apply also to the Jowish villages. A note of warning was sounded by Rosnlin againet "Peace Nnw" leaders, who repeatedly stress op-position to any kind of settlements. "We told them that they should make a difference between Judea and Samaria and our settlement effort in other parts of the country, but they turned a deaf ear to us. Detained Argentine Jewish editor gets top B'nai B'rith news award

By MALKA BABINOWITZ alem Post Correspo

NEW YORK .- The presentation of an award to Jacobo Timerman in absentia yesterday highlights complex aspects of the American Jewish stance regarding the Argentinian community.

The Hubert H. Humphrey Freedom Prize of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is going to a noted Argentinian Jewish newspaperman while be remains un-der house arrest and is not allowed to leave the country. Timerman's 25-year old son, Hector, arrived from Israel to accept the award at a ceremony at the Plaza Hotel here yesterday.

The ceremony took place against a background of quiet differences among Jewish organizations on the most effective course to pursue towards Argentina.

One brake on action is the absence of any request for elp from Argentinian Jewry's representative body, the DAIA. (The Jewish community there numbere close to half a million. i

As to relations between Jerusalem and Buenos Aires, an Israeli official yesterday described these as "nor-mal." Trade and technological exchanges take place between the two countries.

Timerman's case has been raised at the highest level by U.S. officials since his arrest two years ago. He spent a year in prison and was tortured by his captors, who were trying to establish a link between him and Argentinian guerrillas. No charges were ever brought against him. Now under house arrest, Timerman has been stripped of his civil rights by the junta ruling Argentina. The authorities recently announced confiscation of his newspaper "La Opinion" and other property. Internal debats surfaced bere last January when a representative of the World Jewish Congress in Argentina; Dr. Paul Warszawski, circulated a private memo contradicting claims that Timerman's detention was illegal. A sharp rebuttal was issued by Rabbl Morton enthal, director for Latin American affairs of the Anti-Defamation League.

Seeking the middle ground, a national Jewish umbrella group urged "monitoring" of the situation while keeping in mind the wishes of the local community. The National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council last month advised: "We recommend careful monitoring of the situation in Argentina, recognizing that the Argentine Jewish community has its own communal structure. We recommend special efforts on behalf of Jacobo Timerman, as well as othere who are political prisoners beld without charge or 'disappeared.'''

Compromise between advocates of greater and lesser degrees of activism is reflected in a second recommendation:

"Caution and discretion should be exercised in public statements or actions on bchalf of Argentine Jewry with such activities following joint consultation

An element that is the subject of assessment is the degree to which the junta is acting specifically against Jews as distinct to those it views as enemies of the regime. There appears to be a consensus that once singled out, Jows become a special target of anti-Semitic slements in the security forces.

An estimated 15,000 to 20,000 Argentinians have been jailed or have disappeared in the last three years. Among them are 600 Jews who have disappeared and another 400 who have been jailed.

Although the organized community has not sought ald. hundreds of letters from individual Jews seeking bolp for relatives or friends have reached the offices of the ADL in the U.S., ADL officials say. In remarks prepared for delivery at yesterday's ceremony, Frank Stanton, chairman of the Humphrey Prize advisory committee on nominations, said that at least 119 journalists and writers have been victims of repressive government action in Argentina. "Their names comprise a literal 'who'e who' of Argentina's finest journalists, the most prominent being Mr. Timerman," he said.

Stanton continued: "So far as anyone can determine, his only crime is that he is an bonest newspaperman wbo shocked and offended many people in important circles in Buenos Aires."

On May 25. Stanton sent a letter to Argentinian President Jorge Rafael Videla requesting permission for Timerman to.come to New York to receive the award. No reply was received.

The award ceremony came during the 66th National Commission meeting of the ADL, which opened here on Friday. Tomorrow the deliberations move to Jerusalem'e Hilton Hotel.

CAIRO TRIP. - Tel Aviv actor and cinema publicity expert Shish Koller yesterday left Israel for Cairo, via Athens, to take part in an international film festival in the Egyptian capital. He said be was invited to the festival by its organizers, "wbo I've met on various occasions abroad,' and added that he would discuss poesibilitiee for coproductions between the Egyptian film industry - the largest in the Arab world and Israel's.

Sharon hits colleagues after beef-hike plea rejected

By SHLOMO MAOZ Post Economic Reporter

Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon yesterday charged that there is a "concerted effort to destroy farming in Israsi," after failing to get Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich and Industry and Commerce Minister Gideon Patt to accept his demand for an immediate hike in the price of frozen beef.

Sharon made his remarks during a meeting with the two - a meeting which collapsed when Patt, in particular, refused to comply with Sharon'e demand for a IL20 par kilo price rise.

Sharon also raised the issue of frozen heef subsidies, which be says barm local production, during yesterday's cabinet meeting. But Prime Minister Menahcm Begin brushed aside Sharon's attempt to introduce the subject to the agenda. Begin said the issus could be discussed next week when the cabinct takes up the entire issue of freezing the rices for basic commodities.

During the tripartite ministerial meeting yesterday, Ehrlich said that "in principle, frozen beef should not be subsidized."

But he said the Treasury would make a policy decision on the issue in time for next week'e meeting. The Treasury is also due this week to discuss Begin's proposal to freeze commodity prices.

China pledges electoral and legal reforms

PEKING (AP). - China announced yesterday that ite parliament will give the Chinese people eventual free, direct elections by secret ballot and immediate greater independence for the judiciary, as well as added protection for persons accused of crimes.

Bills for these sweeping measures are on the agenda of the Fifth National People's Congress, and were adopted by its preparatory committee yesterday afterncon. They are sure to be passed.

The regime's oft-expressed desire to establish the rule of law is reflected in a series of bills creating judicial organs to deal with criminal and elvil cases.

Chi Peng-fel, a vice chairman of the parliament'e stnnoing committee, reported the extraordinary measuree to foreign and Chinese reporters in an unprecedented news conference on the eve of the two-week session beginning today. He said the 3,299 deputies will be asked to approve a bill which will give the electorate direct rether than indirect power to select deputies to the country people's congressee, with more candidates than seats placed in contention.

Non-communists will be eligible to run, he said. They will also be able to stand for election in later balloting by county and provincial congresses which name the national parliament. Until now cundidates were selected by Communist Party committees, in many cases only one for a seat. During the rule of the party's extremists, many members were appointed rather than elected. Dissidente, come of whom now are under arrest without trial, charge that a number of the precent deputies were chosen in this manner.

Until now, "peoples procurates" which prepare eases and send acpersons to trial have been cused supervised by organs at the same level. Under a proposed new law, they will he controlled by higher organs, a move Chi said would provide for greater legality and demooracy.

The proposed new laws would require changes in the constitution but Chi said epecial resolutions will be adopted which would permit them to go into effect at once. It was not elear, bowever, when the electico reforms will be invoked.

He said non-communists and mass organizations would take part in the process of selecting candidates for elections from the county through to the provincial and national levels. He indicated that the people also will have the opportunity to put up candidates of their own.

Accused persons, he said, will be permitted to be represented by lawyers and they may have the help of their organizations, friends and family. No arrests can be made without prior approval of the procurate.

Carter still party's choice if not voters'

Monday, June 18, 1979

By BARRY SUSSMAN The Washington Post

WASHINGTON. - Jimmy Carter appears to be in a favourable position to regain the Democratic nomination for the presidency despite his having fallen to a low point in public popularity, according to the findings of a new "Washington Post" poll of Democratic Party activists and the general public.

Opposed by many rank and file Democratie voters who prefer Sen. Edward Kennedy as the nominee in 1980, and under attack from many in the liberal wing of the party, Carter may not have the standing an incumbent president would bope for.

Nevertheless, the poll shows, no Democrat aside from Carter and Kennedy is currently drawing any sizable support — and Carter is guits acceptable to many Democrats if Kennedy maintains his current posture and does not eeck the presidency.

Anything ean happen between now and the Democratic presidential nominating convention next summer. Public opinion samplings more than a year before the event are obviously suspect.

But, judging from the views of the delegates to the last convention, more than haif of whom were interviewed by mail in "The Post's" poli, Carter is in far better shape right now than the conventional wisdom in Washington would brive it.

Now, in fact, 44 per cent of the 1976 convention delegates say they favour Carter as the nominee for 1980. That may not be much to boast about, given the fact that Carter has been in the White House for 21/2 years. But it does not appear to be a loss, and It's a far cry from the perceived massive erosion of political support for the president so much discussed these days.

Among the delegates Carter bests Kennedy, selected by 35 per cent as their first choice for the nomination. Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown of California drew only 4 per cent. Nine per cent were undecided, and 8 per cent lined up hetween a scattering of other potential candidates.

Naturally, delegates to the 1976 convention include a higher proportion of Carter supporters than would a random sample of all Democratic Party activists. Mueb of the liberal left never made it to the convention in Nsw York because the candidates they represented were knocked off in state primaries or in conventions. It is among that liberal segment of party activists that Carter finds his them now. In the "Post" poli, delegatee were asked to describe their political ideology on a scale of one to nine ranging from very liberal to very conservative. Carter easily beste Kennedy among the 80 per cent who listed their ideology as somewhat liberal to very conservative. But among the "ones" and "twos." those who would be concidered very liberal, Kennedy was the choice over Carter by a 59-to-25 per cent margin. Nevertheless, even many of these strong liberals tend to fall back on Carter as their choice if Kennedy does not run. Forty-five per cent of the strong liberals who prefer Kennedy still choose Carter second while only 15 per cent go to the only other potential nominee to receive any noticeable mention - Brown, VIENNA (AP). - When U.S. President Jimmy Carter and Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet leader, sign the SALT II nuclear weapons control treaty here today they will also exchange letters on a controversial Soviet bomber.

The exchange is designed to cettle a tong-standing dispute over whether the Tupolev TU-26, known in the West as the Backfire, is a long-range or Intermediate weapon. Ad-ministration officials said on Satur-day that the issue has been resolved to their satisfaction. But it could figure in the fight over U.S. Senate ratification of the treaty. A number of Senators contend the bomher is a strategic weapon and should be counted against the total permitted to the Russians in SALT II, which limits until 1985 the numbers of strategie weapons the two superpowers may aim at each other. The U.S. military claims that the Backfire, which the Russians say is deployed against peripheral land targets in Europe and Asia, could be

Meeting of the Zionist General Council

You would think that as the market price of natural petroleum went up, the price of synthetics would become attractive.' It hasn't happened that way, reports SPENCER RICH from Washington.

IN DECEMBER 1972, the prsetigious National Petrolsum Council (NPC) reported that if It became necessary to make synthetic oli from the nation's shale reserves, the selling price would be about $8.29 a barrel, including shipping costs. If the synthetic crude oil were made from coal, the NPC estimated the cost at $7.75 to $8.25 a harrel.

The price of imported crude oil at that time was less than $9.50 a barrel.

Today, as a result of price-setting by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), crude is selling for $16 to $18 a barrel - and increases of $3 to $4 a harrel are expected. Spot prices have hit $30 a barrei. Even allowing for inflation since 1972, the NPC estimates for synthetic crude don't match the current import price.

"You would think that as the market price of natural petroleum went up," sald one Canadian expert, the prics of synthetics would become attractive" and U.S. companies would begin producing synthetic crude.

It hasn't happened that way. Instead, "every time the OPEC price goes up," said Harvard conomist Hendrick Houthakker, a member of the council of econor advisers during the Nixon administration, "the price of synthetics goes up with it."

Since the 1972 NPC report, the oil industry has repeatedly raised its cost estimates for producing synthetic crudes - syncrudee large scale. No matter how high the OPEC price, the projected costs of shale oil and liquid crude from coal have always managed to jump a few dollars higher.

Today, industry is talking about $20 to $35 a barrel for syncrude, a price increase of 250 to 400 per cent, compared to a cost-of-living increase of about 80 per cent since 1970. Oil companies cay it is still more profitable to look for conventional oil than to produce synthetic crude, and that new technical and environmental prohlems with cynthetics are being discovered all the time

As a result, there still isn't a single major synthetic crude plant in the U.S. and none is under construction. The oil industry has spent only paltry amounts on research and development in synthetics. Synthetics production doesn't require extremely exotic techniques: extraction of oil from shale hy heating the maristone rock to about 480 degrees centigrade has been accomplished here and in other countries. During World War II, Germany produced 100,000 barrels a day of airplane gasoline made from coal a technique copied hy South Africa's Sasol plant, which is now being enlarged. The remarkable climb in the projected cost of synthetics since 1972 raises questions: have estimates deliberately been inflated hy industry (and, as a result, by U.S. agencies depending on the industry for information) because it doesn't want to invest in costly conversion plants when there is plenty of profitable liquid oil in the world? Do they fear that the relatively cheap production, of syncrude would impose a ceiling on the price of imported and domestic conventional crude?

A synthetics expert at the House of Representatives Commerce Committee suspects this may be the case. The leap in the estimated synthetics price, the expert said, could reflect the fact that "the industry is not particularly interested in bringing it on" hecause ""they're making plenty of money. I think as the OPEC price went up, they continued to raise their ynthetics estimates without a particularly close look."

It's interesting to trace the rallel. course of skyrocketing OPEC prices and syncrude calculations. In mid-1978, when the price of con- .

Natural crude at $16 to $18 a barrel is still cheaper than synthetics.

a barrel, Massachusetts Institute of Technology president Jerome B. Weisner, told a House bearing that oil from shale could be produced for $4.50 a barrel in constant dollars (a price not adjusted for inflation) --even lower than the NPC estimates. On June 22, 1973, Charles Dibona, now head of the American Petroleum Institute but then the Prasident's energy adviser, es-timated a price of $5.50 to $7 a barrel. Then, at the end of 1978, came the Arah oil embargo, and the OPEC price rises started. At first there was little oorresponding increase in the estimated cost of syncrude. Early in 1974, Deputy Energy Ad-ministrator John Sawhill gave the same $5.50-to-$7 estimate that Dibona bad given a half-year earlier.

The National Academy of Engineering said oil from shale would cost $6 to $5 a barrel (using the richest shales) and crude produced from coal liquefaction perbaps $8 to $7 a harrel A U.S. Navy study predicted that the price of imported crude would rise to $13.60 a barrel by 1977 (im-pressively hitting the ultimate figure almost on the nose). But that of from shale might be produced for $8.77 a harrel, and synthetic erude ventional crude was still about $3.50 from coal for about twice that sum. The Federal Energy Administration'e November 1974 "Project Independence'' report speculated that the world price for crude might drop back to $7 or ao a barrel. Because of uncertainty over ices, it calculated the profitability of shale and coal syncrude on the assumption that in 1985, the market price of oil might be either $7 a. barrel or $11 (both in 1674 dollars). It concluded that synthetics would be only "marginally economic" at $7 a barrei bnt "at $11 they are > onomic. By 1975, however, the estimated costs for synthetics caught up with OPEC prices and hegan paseing them. The OPEC import price was around $13.

The Oil Shale Corp. (Tosco) told a House bearing that if it could get funding it could produce oil competing with "today's price for Middle Bast sweet (low-sulfur) crude landed in U.S. ports... for $13.15 a harrel." A government task force estimated the cost of oil from sbalc (in 1975 dollars) at $10 to $13 and eyncrude from coal at $19 to $26 a barrel. Standard, of California, put the figures at $17 for shale ofl and $30 for syncrude from coal

Today, the estimated costs are comfortably beyond the $16 to $18

(Camera Press) price of world market OPEC oil. The Department of Energy is now talking about $22 to $25 a barrel for oil from shale, and for synthetic crude from coal, over $25.

WHAT ACCOUNTS for this amazing upward flight of the estimated costs of producing syncrude, paralleling the upward flight of OPEC cartel pricee end far outstripping the general risc in the cost of living?

One explanation is that the oil and coal industries clearly haven't press-ed too hard on research and other nding to make the technological breakthroughs that would assure low production costs for syncrude.

A Census Bureau study for the National Science Foundation shows that total spending in 1978 by U.S. industries to research and develop syncrude production was $23m. for shale and $178m. for coal, including some government subsidies.

Department of Energy sources say these figures may be understated because some of the research and development costs may be tucked away in other accounts.

But even if the figures were douhled, they are peanuts compared with the $7.8b billion the Census Burean calculates the oil industry spent in 1977 exploring for conventional sourcee of oli and gas in the U.S. and

The U.S. government lan't doing all that much either. President Carter's request for all syncrude projects for fiscal 1980 is about

5m. — $70m. less than fiscal 1979. DOE spokesmen say several projects flopped, and one is to be funded from the oil windfall profits tax. Some consider this a strange posture in an administration with apparently deep concern for the nation's energy problems.

Another explanation of the rocketing cost estimates on syncrude - one widely shared hy respected angineers and economists is that many of the optimistic carlier projections really were based on inadequate engineering and economic studies, and those projections could not have taken into account the pressure of inflation, cs-pecially in construction costs.

Harry Perry, a chemical engineer who was coal research director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines and is now with Resources for the Future, said that inflation, added environmental cieanup requirements, higher capital costs and exbaustive engineering studies that uncover unpreseen prohlems account for the big boos Costs of heavy construction, coal and borrowing money have also risen rapidly.

Robert Stobaugh, director of Har-vard Business School's energy pro-ject, and many others streased that until plants are actually huilt, all the problems and costs oan't be known. Still another factor is that oil companies fear they will pay out buge amounts of money - $1h. to $2b. for 75,000-harrele-a-day 50,000-tonmercial-sized plants to convert shale or coal into crude at $20 to $30 a. harrel - only to see the Saudis cut the guts out of the market by lower-

This action was typical of the man, who despite his reputation for brilliant political analysis and cunning, is also renowned for his expiosive and hasty temper. But he rebounded strongly. Keeping his Bavarian power-hase, Strauss joined forces with his old chief Adenauer, to topple "Der Alte's" weak successor, Ludwig Erhard, in 1966. His support, reportedly, was then instrumental in making Kurt-Georg Klesinger the Federal Chancellor, and Strauss enjoyed the reward of Finance Minister in Bonn's Grand Coalition government up to 1969.

In the 10 years since, Strauss has consistently overshadowed the Christian Democrat leaders Rainer Barrel and Helmut Kohl, Rough and earthy, with a reputation for political opportunism, his gemutlichkeit demagogic style does not go down well in industrialized, northern Germany, where he is still widely looked upon as a ruthless, reactionary, Conservative hick. However, in the conservative, "Remember, the Saudis can break the hank any time they want." said Dr. Larry Goldmuntz, a consultant and science planner.

To counter this fear, a House banking committee bill authorizes $2b. in subsidies to cover losses if the market drops below certain target prices.

But inertia must also be reckoned with: the oil and coal companies are accustomed to producing conventional forms of fossil fuels. The oll industry is making money. Why go into expensivs new technologies?

Meanwhile, however, several companies are moving cautiously into syncrude. Occidental, which has taken over one of the oil shale tracts ieased from the government in the est, is experimenting with an underground shale method that would avoid some environmental problems and produce oil for sale at a price. after upgrading and shipping, of $19 to $24 a barrel. With a proposed tax credit on shale sought by DOE, this could work out to off at about $14 to $20 a barrel — a competitive price in the world market.

Union Oil is going ahead with a $130m. 9,000-harrel-a-day pliot plant, and Exxon and Shell, fairly hullish on Canadian tar sands, are negotiating for hig plants (100,000 barrels a day or so) that will cost $5b. and $4b., respectively. Charies Brown, then representing Tosco, warned Congress a fcw years ago that big oil was unlikely to invest much in syncrude production until it bad sucked most of the easy conventional crude out of all the nooks and crannies of the carth.

"They say, quite frankly, that syntbetics must come later, after Alaska, after the North Sea and after offshore drilling."

But companies like Union, Occidental and the Canadian tar sand ventures insist that they are serious and will go ahead.

As soon as the tax credit is passed. said Union's Tom Hairston, "you will see very fast whether we'li start

Middle East affairs are a great concern for Strauss. He visited Egypt in May 1977, and Saudi Arabia in Octoher of the same year. He told an Israeli reporter in 1976 that "the German government...must speak in the same voice to Arahe and Israelis." During his 1977 Egypt visit, a Cairo newspaper quoted him , as saying that he favoured resolving the Middle East conflict (comprehensively) through the Geneva Conference, with Palestinian participation either separately, or within a united Arah delegation.

Strauss is not the type of man to feel bound by the moral sentiments out of respect to Israel. As long ago as January, 1951 he urged U.S. High Commissioner John McCloy to pardon 28 Nazi war criminals awalting execution in Landsherg Jail. Should the executions go through, Strauss argued, "the hlow to German morale would be great and the effect on German-American relations would be devastating." In recent years, he has been the loudest and most consistent German politician to oppose repcal of the statute of limitations, so that no new prosecutions for war crimes may start after 1979.

Strauss's wartime service has been the subject of considerable controversy. When he visited Israel in. June 1963, Menahem Begin, then Opposition leader, alleged that he had been Chief Education Officer to the salzaruppen, the Special Murder "Nonsense...a piece of Communist propaganda."

In January 1957, the magazine "Der Spiegel" reported a double defamation charge between Strauss, JUNE IS the month of sponge haths and eau de cologne for diplomats and foreign journalists in Peking. Also of heat that would curl your hair.

Why the perfume? The answer is simple: the hot water has been turn-ed off in the "diplomatic ghetto." Turned off, that is for the next 20 days or so.

It is an event that repeats itself every year at about this time and, as usual, it has raised tempers to the boiling point among the 1,500 or so residents of Peking's diplomatic quarters.

Everyone shlvers, from ambasaadors to secretaries. The few who don't care are those with hot water systems of their own.

Knowing this doesn't help much. Have you ever tried hathing in icy water? Though the tempcrature often soars over 35° Centigrade in the summer months, the water-piped in from distant reservoirs - retains a glacial quality little admired these

The former Wimbledon champion, 27, took just 61 minutes to beat 23year-old Barker and retain the titls she won last year.

Cawley's victory dollars boosted her coofidence for Wimhicdon. which starts io ons week.

The Australian raced through the first eet in 21 minutes, and after Barker came hack from two service breaks at 1-4 to within o point of 4-4, she snuffed out the revival with soma athletic volleying that the British player could oot match.

In the women's doubles finals at Chichester, Greer Stevens, South Africa, and Wondy Turnhnii, Australia, defeated Billie Jean King and Martina Navratilova, U.S., 6-3, 1-6, 7-6.

Veteran star King will he aiming for a record 20th Wimhledon victory in her doubles partnership with Navratilova.

In yesterday's action in the Stella Artois tennis tournament at Lon-don's Queen's Club, John McEnroe argued with the umpire and had a penalty point awarded against him for the second straight day. Despite the incident, McEnroc defeated fellow American Sandy Mayer 2-6, 6-2, 6-4 and reached the semifinals.

In the first set, McEnroe question-ed a line call when Mayer served an ace. At the end of the game, he went up to the umpirs, Roy Cope Lewis, and said. "I want your name. I will see that you are never on my court again." The comment earned him the penalty point, awarded by the umpire under new Grand Prix rules. McEnroe qualified to play Roscoe

Tanner, who defeated Nick Saviano 6-4, 6-3. In another quarter-final match, Arthur Ache hcat Dick Stockton 6-4, 6-4. The semifinals were scheduled for Inter in the day. In European Davis Cup sectional meets, Italy, Francs and Rumania all advanced into their respective eemifinals yesterday.

Corrado Barazzutti and Adriano Panatta of Italy beat Poland's Woitek Fibak and Henryk Dryzmalski, resulting in a final 4-1 win. The scores were 7-5, 5-7, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 and 6-2. 6-1.

France ewept its series from Switzerland; 5-0, thanks to singles victories hy Yanwick Nooh and Dominique Bedel yesterday. They heat Roland Stadler and Heinz Gunthardt 5-4, 5-0, 5-2 and 2-5, 5-4, 4-6, 14-12, 7-5.

Rumania also won its last two singles matches from Wcst Ger-many, for a 4-1 total victory. It was Dumitru Haradau over Peter Elter, 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1, and Ilie Nastase over Max Wuenshcig, 6-1, 6-3, 7-5.

Rumania will meet Sweden in Group B comifinals July 13-16 in Bucharest. The winner will face either France or Czechoslovakia, whose teams play next month in Paris. Italy will play Hungary in a Group A comffinal.

CRICKET. - The second Prudential World Cricket Cup, now heing played off in England, reached the (and not the finals as atated in yesterday's agency report from Lon-don). The semifinal line-up is the West Indice vs. Pakistan and England ve. New Zealand. The West Indies won the first World Cup competition four years ago, defeating Australia in the final.

CHICAGO (AP). - Reports that Muhammad Ali has submitted a letter of resignation to the World Boxing Association are not true, a spokssman for the hcavyweight champion said yesterday.

Monday, June 18, 1979

associate and the boxer's attorncy. said that the contention hy boxing promoter Bob Arum that Ali has submitted a letter of resignation. in writing to WBA president Fernando Mandry Galindez is not accurate. Arum made the statement during a news conference in Monte Carlo on Saturday. Dihhle read a statement for Ali eaying "Arum is not my epokesman and I have never needed anyone to epeak for me. I am well known for my speaking ability and will continue to make my own an-nouncements and decisions. When I am ready to retire, the whole world will know it.

The WBA has given Ali until September 15 to sign for a title defence, one year from the date he beat Leoo Spinks to regain his title. Arum is promoting the June 24

WBA heavyweight elimination bour in Monte Carlo between former champion Spinks and South African Gerris Coetzee. The victor will meet American John Tate, winner of another elimination bout against Kallie Knoetze, in what Arum hopes Eugene Dihhle, a longtime Ali will be a title fight to determine the successor to Ali's crown if the cham. Boxing champs crowned

ON THIS Rosh Hashana (September 22) a cabbatical year, the so-called ehmitta, will begin. This word in English means abandonment or renunciation. During the shmitta year, observant Jews arrange their lives so as to follow the prescriptions of the ancient law stated in the Book of Exodus (23:10-11);

"And six years thou shalt sow thy land and shalt gather in the fruits thereof: But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still."

I have received letters and phone calls from readers acking for professional advice on this subject. After consulting rabbinical circle and books, I am convinced that growing food and flowers by soilless (hydroponic) systems would be a welcome substitute for regular borticulture during the shmitta year. Here, therefore, I shall describe different proposals for doing this. First, however, let us consider the law.

Can you imagine the living conditions of the Israelites after the exodus from Egypt? The seemingly endless wandering for 40 years through sandy deserts, glowing hot in the day and gloomy at night. The primitiveness of their life in tents must have been similar to that of the nomadic Beduin we know today.

Surrounded by barren rock and high mountains with scarcely a green plant, the elders of Israelgather ed at the foot of Mount Sinal . and heard of the divine vision of

Thus come $,500 years ago the Children of Israei were given a detailed law about soil improvement. Only a soil-bound people, deeply involved in agriculture and all its problems, could create such a law. We must, therefore, logically . lude that our ancestors were keen farmers and gardeners when they settled in Egypt at the fertile oasis of Goshen, which was long before they became the slaves of the oew Pharaoh who "did not know Joeeph." The divine law on agriculture was fitting, not for slaves, but for productive farmers, and was given in the prophetic spirit of ... "when ya come into the land which I give you ' And as soon as the Children of Israel eet foot on the soil of Eretz Yisrael, they became farmers and gardeners.

DEPENDING on one's art world jargon this film is experimental, avant-garde or an undarground work. And the Tel Aviv Museum is taking a positive step towards fulfilling the role of a major museum of modern art in showing it. Within any terminology it represents a distinct mova away from the commercial. filme that dominate the cinema fare Israeli audiances bave been fed since the hirth of the nation.

The showing of short, generally half-hour, experimental films has been confined mainly to cinemathes quest and has had a limited sublinet. in Israel. This is the first full-length feature shown here that can in an intellectually honest sense be referred to as avant-garde.

It centres about the inner struggles

IN MODERN TIMES there is no agricultural need for a year-long rest for the soll to overcome infertility and unwanted pests and diseases. Organized crop rotation, artificial fertilizer and the extermination of pests and fungus discases by chemical and organic means allow for uninterrupted economical use of fields and gardens.

When I was involved in agriculture on a big Austrian farm many years ago, an up-to-date system of rotation wae the practice, alternating challow and deep-rooting crops. It was still the custom of farmers with small holdings in the area to give their fields a year of rest, which in German they called brah-fald (fallowness-field). This was most beneficial, because the frequently rainy summer season in Europe produced a considerable quantity of weeds. These were ploughed into the soil at the end of the rest year, providing it with one of the best known natural fertilizers, so-called green manure.

Green manure farming ie the modern name for the ancient practice that emerged from the shmitta law. Roman agricultural literature. also urges the use of green materials for building up and maintaining soil fertility. Lentils and medic, the ancestor of alfalfa, were specifically mantioned as land-improving crops. For many generations, for both Jews and gentiles during ancient times and the Middle Ages, the law of the Tora eurvived ns the traditional norm-in agriculture. The world's farmers went over to the system of crop rotation, instead of the Jewish law of a sabbatical year of rest for their fields, only at the beginning of the 20th century. Scientific discovery had wrought the change. Two particular researchers should be noted. One was the Swedish botanist Carl von Linné, the great classifier known as Linneaus. His grouping of plants into families with like attributes, the "Species Planiarum" was published in 1753. The German chemist Justus von Liehlg identified the essential elements of plant food in 1870, But giving the earth a sahhatical year is still observed by Orthodox Jewry. through hydroponics. or soilleas systeme. Hydroponics was used for many years in the study of plant nutrition. During World War II, in America and Japan, and then more recently in Israel, this method of growing plants was adopted by commercial and amateur gardeners as a means of producing high-yiald, high quality crops, cleanly and cheaply. The foundsr of the first fully automatic hydroponic farm in Israel, at the Agudat Israel kibbutz Hefets Haim, was the Israall botanist Meir Schwartz. In his book, "Hydroponies in Israel." published hy the Institute for Agricultural Research According to the Tora, family with fruit and vegetables dur-Schwartz writes: "This method will ing the ehmitia year can be solved help solve the problem in religious and elsewhere, the prevnlling. medium used is gravel. The first hydroponic system of water culture was lovented in 1940 by Prof. William Gericke at the University of California at Berkeley.

Hydroponic farming was first practised in India, in 1948, by a British agronomist, J. Sholto Douglas, who called it the "Bengal systam." It used three hasic pieces of equipment. A container or plant bed, usually made of concrete and equipped with a water distribution channel, was connected to a water reservoir. Most often the reservoir was underground, but Yair Meraz. for example, has a ground-level one at his hydroponic farm in Elint. The third element was piping and a pump with an electric timer.

A nutrient solution (to he described later) is stored in the reservoir and pumped into the containers hy a centrifugal pump. The solution goes to the beds through their drainage system and flows through the piping meeting the heds until each con tainer receives the required level of solution. Surplus solution drains hack by the force of gravity into the Teservoir.

The concrete beds are commonly 20 to 30 metres long, one metre wide and about 20 cm. deep. Thair bottom is slightly V-shaped and partly covered with a concrete drainage

One of the strengths of the film is that at its end, one cannot be completely certain who has "won" and who has not. Ths levals of violence and bloodshed in the film are extraordinarily high. Because this is a necessary part of what the film is eaving, it is forgivable and understandable. The nutrient solution originally used hy the inventors of soilless culture contained tb6 following chemicals with the amounts given per every hundred litres of water: Potassium nitrate, KNO3, which is also called saltpetre, 54 grams; trebie superphosphate, Ca (H,PO,), 14 g; calcium nitrate, Ca (NO₂), 9 g; the magnealum salt known as epsom salt, MgSO, H₂O, 13g; and iron sulphate, Fe, (SO,), 1.4g. The solution also includes traces — less than half a gram per 100 litres of water - of borax, copper sulphate and other zinc and manganese compounds. Gravel culture has a high initial cost, which professional hydroponic developers can afford. The home gardener needs a emailer and less Expensive system. The best plant growing medium, which has received approval (heksher) as a soil substitute in shmitta years, is vermiculite, called matsits in Hebrew. Vermiculite, produced by Mosbav Habomm on Hof Hacarmel, is a sterile medium that should be used like ordinary garden soil. Any container with drainage holes (concrete, plastic, clay, wood, metal, etc.) may be used for planting, according to the rules of the Tora, if you place it either inside your home (for house plants), on a balcony or on a paved roof or patio. It must not ha used in the open garden! Secure a good drainate hy placing flat etones over the bottom holes of the container, fill to capacity with the medium and water with a nutrient colution with a 1:10 ratio of the above-mentioned chemicals, or in their stead, use "20-20-20" fertilizer for each litre of water. Then eow or plant according to your reguirements exactly as in soil culture.

You can also use plants grown from seed in a nursery box filled with vermiculite. Sunshinc, or sufficient artificial light, is essential for success.

What to grow? Vitamine in the shmitta year are of particular importance. I propose, therefore, the following crops:

For the winter seacon plant ecedlings in September of: lettuce, kohlrabi, Swiss chard (in place of spinach), ceiery and cabhage. By seed plant: parsley, garden cress, mustard, dlll, radishes, pens. broadbeans. By bulblets: green onions.

For the snmmer season plant seedlings in March of: lettuce (second crop), kohlrabi (agaln), tomatoes, peppers, eggplant. By eceds: cucumbers, marrows, beans and parsley ngain.

And what about potatoes? I believe thai the British system of growing potatoes in plastic sacks on flat roofs or haleonies also fits shmitta re-quirements. Simply switch over from a soil filling to a vermiculite medium.

Place the eacks on a solld (concrete or tile) surface - not on gar-den soll. Everything is simple: punch 3-4 holes into the bottom of n large empty plastic sack, put a 10 cm deep layer of stonee over the drainage holes and fill 2/3 full with grads 2, 3, or 4 vermiculite.

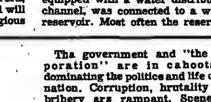

Insert 3-4 sprouting potatoes (best at the end of August or early September), and cover the seed potatoes with n 10 cm.-deep layer of vermiculite. Place 4 sticks (each nbout one metre long) into the corners of the sack, to keep the surface open for watering. Water with the above-mentioned nutrient solution as prescribed abova. When you water pleatifully at the time of sowing. add some nutrient "20-20-20" salt at the surface of the sack (about 2-8 teaspoonfuls). Nature will do the rest, with winter rains sporadically water ring your potatoes. No work at ali need be done.

With a little hit of luck, you may be able to make your Hanukka latkes with potatoes grown by this colless system — Kochar according to the requirements of shmitta.

Israel's status as a developing country was also attacked at the UNCTAD meeting. Defending Israel's standing as similar to that of others such as Brazil and Argentina, who are classified as developing countries, Gabay noted that nevertheless there is a move towards a new classification. Although some 30 Arah delegations and their sympathizers staged a walk-out when he addressed the conference Justice Ministry Director-General Melr Gabay returned apparently satisfied with the response to Israel's proposals and the generally improved attitude of many of the conference participants.

Gabay noted that the conference almost broke up, and in tha final analysis indeed failed, because of the OPEC countries' refusal to meet the request of other developing countries to discuss the energy crisis. "We have reached a milestone in our

He finds comfort in the permanence of the architecture of Versailles, the transcendance of tha music of Mozart, and the insanity of King Ludwlg, the Mad, of Bavaria, Through these "media" the artist and the film find their tempo, their metier and their existence.

Peres' fiim, like avant-garde cinema in general, flouts all the standards hy which cinema has been made and judged for many decades. It may therefore appear as a provocation to people expecting to find what they would recognize as a 'weli-made'' movie.

A weli-made movie is expected to present characters who are carefully constructed and convincingly motivated: this film contains hardly any recognizable 'real people." They are possessed by seemingly unmotivated actions. A well-made movis is expected to entertain by the patter of logically built-up dialogue: the dialogue in "Parell-NonParell" seems at times to degenerate into babble. A well-made movie is expected to have n beginning, a middle and a neatly tied-up ending: this movie starts at an arbitrary point and ends just as arbitrarily.

HAIFA. - Stress is inevitably and actively part of our lives. It can damage nur health, cause real, and not merely psychosomatic illnesses, and impair nur morale and sense of well-being. Navertheless, scientists know very little about it, Berkely Barkslay University Professor Richard S. Lazarue thid The Jerusalem Post recently. Onc of the wnrld's leading authorities on strese and adjustment, he participated in the first conterence on denial, held in the eecond week of June at Haifa University. "The choice of denial as subject was most fortunate, for it's by denial that most people choose to handle a difficult altuation. We pretend it just isn't that serious, or even that it isn't there. Israelis, for instance, offer a wonderful example with their constant use of yikeyeh beseder (it will hc all right)," Lezarus said.

Until very recently, denial was considered an immeture reaction, an inadequate way of coping with events, for, people are taught, they must face reality. But scientists have increasingly been finding out that people seem to live well with the ald of denial and that it very effectively helps them to cope with many situations of stress. This conference was important because it was the first tme that a group of scientists came to discuss the subject of denial and its implications, he explained.

Tall and broad-shouldcred, Latarus only begins to look very much one of the world's top paycoologists when he starts speaking. his voice mellow and his pace moderate. Israel's proposal for an international co-financing facility, as it is called, was originally made by the Bank of Israel Governor Arnon Gafny at a World Bank conference. Gabay's speech at the UNCTAD meeting was so widely covered by tha local and international media. that the PLO delegate even complained to the Phillipines's foreign ministry.

"The facility we envisage calls for tha World Bank and the regional developmant hanks to prepare development loan proposals far in excess of their own direct lending capacities which could then be cold more readily to the hanking community," Gahay said. The World Bank and the regional development banks would thus be able to direct the bulk of their funds to the less devaloped countries, and hy patently demonstrating thair involvement and technical expertise in develop ment hanking, they would thereby help to overcome many of the private capital market's reservations about entering the field.

Israel also proposed an international crop insurance scheme to help protect the commodity exports of developing countries.

GABAY NOTED that compared with the last UNCTAD gathering, in Nairobi in 1976, many African and Asian delegations had been more sympathetic and friendly in Manila. The recent peace treaty made both Israel and Egypt tha objects of vociferous nttacke hy the rejectionist countries and some of their supporters, hut this attempt to income developing countries will be established: Mexico, Brazil, South Korsa, and India, for example, together with more developed nations such as Spain, Portugal, Greece and Turkey." Israel sbares many interests with these nations and chould be placed among them. One of the interesting changes in attitude that Gabay noted was that of the Chinese delegation, active in his own field of epeciality - international agreements for the transfer of technology. Israel and China were the only two countries nttending UNCTAD who do not belong to one of the three blocks there: "The group of 77" (the 119 developing countries), "group B" (the developed countries), and the eocialist countries. The Chinese maintained formally correct relations with tha Israelis and did not exclude them from n cultural reception their delegation hald for other delegates. At the Nairobi conferanca on the other hand, they walked out when the Israell delsgate was invited to speak. The next UNCTAD session will in all prohability he hald in Cuha despite the opposition of the U.S. and several African countries. Isrnel has already begun lobbying to ensure that all members participate.

the results contradict the widelyheid belief that women are moreemotional than men. The truth seems to be quite the opposite, Lezarus says, pointing out that it is society that is most responsible for inhibitions which keep men from showing amotions.

"If a man watches 'Love Story' on his own, he is likely to cry as — if not more, than a woman. But when he le with others, he will hold hack his tears as unmasculina."

Lazarus, who was horn in New York City 57 years ago, explains his lifelong enthusiasm for psychology by eaving that the Jewish youth of his generation "were very introspective, and wanted very much to understand" what went on within themselves and how they might reach people

After taking his Bachalor's degrae, he interrupted his studies to serve as an artillery officer during World War II. The war, he explains, macked a turning point in psy-chological research. There was a great deal of anxiety in military circics over those who returned home with neuroses of various kinds. They wanted to know how to treat them, how to distinguish in the future between those who were more stress-prone than the others. This concern opened new avenues for clinical psychology and research, and funds were suddenly available.

PEOPLE have different ways of reacting to stress. Some shrink under it and othere thrive; coma develop ulcers, othere seem to grow stronger in order to overcome what they consider a challenge. The questions scientists are concerned with today no longer revolve around the existence of stress, = hut rather how to deal with it; what is it that makes some peopla better equipped to cope with it than others, and whether it can be prevented or treated.

For Lazarus, denial - or "saifdeception," as he termed It - is a way of coping. "I agree with Eugene O'Neili who said, in "The Iccman Cometh." that life is not worth living without lliusions. U.S. fights Europe for control of medium aircraft market

By JACK MAURICE

Jerusalem Post Correspondent PARIS, - The six nation European Airhus consortium and the United States' mighty Boeing Company are locked in a relentless contest to win the orders of the world's major air-lines for the wide-bodied passenger afreraft of the 1980s and the 1990s.

The contenders are the Airbus A 310 and the Boeing 767. The carriers want a 200-seater airliner which can fly medium-haul routes with maximum saving of costly fuel and, in our environment-conscious times. with minimum noise and poliution.

Technology, economics and politics are closely involved. Boeing, the biggest maker of airpianes in the Western world, is determined to bring to its kness a European aircraft industry which is reviving for the first time since the eve of World War

So the American government and those of France, Britain, Germany, Holiand, Spain and Belgium — the airhus partners - are fully committed to the success of their respeclive candidalee. Al stake is an estimated market for 4,000 aircraft before the end of the century.

Airbus snters the fray with the bulging order books and an im-pressive service record for its A300, of which the A310 will be a shortened version. The A300 has been chosen by a ecore of airilnes since Air Francs introduced it five years ago. In all economy or mixed classes, it cas carry between 250 and 310 passengers. Over 350 planes are now on order or on option.

Boeing can call on its reputation as the producer of the world's most reliable dynasty of aircraft which todsy include the 747 jumbo, the shortrange 787 and the medium-haul 727. which has outsold any airliner ever bullt.

The choice between the airhus A310 and the Boeing 767 is not going to be easy for the airlines and the governments and bankers who in most cases, will take the final decision. So far Boeing has logged 165 orders and options and airbus 107.

Ticket-holding passengers will not get aboard for another three years. Boeing hopes to have a head start in ibe summer of 1982. But Airbus is confident its first aircraft will be in service the following spring.

For the traveller, the most striking difference hetween the two planes is the width of the fuselage. The ncw

Israel, Egypt to host advertisers meet in 1981

Israei and Egypt wili jointly host a symposium of the Internatiosal Advertising Associatios (IAA), Yosef Na'aman, president of the Israci branch of the advertisers associations, simounced recently.

Na'aman, speaking at the meeting of the local branch of the IAA, said the four-day symposium scheduled for the spring of 1981 will be split with two days in Egypt and two days in Israel. The decision to hold the joint symposium was taken by the IAA's world board of directors in Amsterdam. The IAA's world president, Hugb Holker of Britain, has asked the Egyptian emhassy at The Hague to allow Na'aman to leave for Calro as soon as possible to work out detaile of the symposium with the president of the Egyptian IAA hranch, Abduilsh Abdci-Bari. The joint symposium will be the msjor event of the IAA in 1981. In 1980, the sasoclation's international congress will be held in Durhan, South Africa, and in 1982, in Rio de Janeiro.

Airbus will provide eight seats abreast in economy class, like the now veteran A300. Boeing has come up with a new design, which owes nothing to its existing aircraft, with sevan abreast.

The European and American manufacturers have ssiected different wing designs. Airbus' team British Aerospacs - former Hawker Siddsley - in Chester bave opted for a small wing which will make good use of high-lift devices, in the tradition of the A300.

Boeing's huge wing will be cne-third larger than that of Airbus. Big wings mean economies at maximum cruising aititude - close to 40,000 feet - on the coast-to-coast routes flown by American domestic airlines. But Airbus says its design will be more sconomical on an average European stags of about 800

Airbus had the advantage is star-ting with the successful A300 design and has shortened it to obtain a 200sest cabin. The design of the tuselage and wing is clearly intended to suit the requirements of the A310 first customers. These are Lufthansa, Air France, Swissair and KLM, all of whom operate chorter stages than the American trunk routes.

Both the Boeing 767 and the Airbus A310 will burn less fuel than the narrow-bodied aircraft of the last generation. But the Boeing looks like being the natural choice for American domestic airlinee and airbus for the Europeans.

Both aircraft will be equally thrifty on fuei. General Electric's CF-6 series engines and Pratt and Whitney's NJT-9DS, which already power the Airbus A 200, are both like-ly to find their place in the new Airbus and Boeing hig twins. The engine designers are working hard on new versions of these power plants for the 767 and A 310.

Fuel burn has a major influence on the costs of operating any aircraft. It also affects the range and, because it can either reduce or increase weight, it shows in taks-off performance

Airilnes which have iong associations with Rolls Royce are likely to prefer a British engine in their new Boeing or Airhus. This will soon be possible thanks to an agree-ment signed at the Le Bourget Air Sbow in Juns under which Airhus Industrie and Rolis Royce will develop an RB.211 for the new European wide-body.

Carriers will also taks into consideration the cargo space available on the rival aircraft. Boeing offers more bold space under the floors. But, unlike Airbus, it cannot use the standard sized containers and pallets which fit neatly into other airliners.

Airbus also has the advantage over Boeing in the cost of training crews, a beavy item in the budget for introducing a new aircraft into an airlinc fleet. Airbus can claim that the cockpit and flying drills for the new A310 are almost the same as for the A300. Since the 767 has no direct predecessor, Boeing cannot use the same argument in its favour.

Both manufacturers are introducing the latest push-hutton and micro-processor technologies inlo their new wide-bodiee. They will also be using new graphite composites both man-mads and carhonfibres in their fuselages. So far Boeing's and Airbus'e 200-seaters have been accoping orders almost entirely on their own con-tinents. Airhus's control of the European market explains why KLM, a traditional Boeing customer, bas deelded to change camps. The Dutch carrier eays it does not want to he the only airline in Europe to huy the 767

Airbus is also counting on the loyalty of A300 customers for the ccess of the A310 --- in fact, more than loyalty, "commonality" - or the use of the same components, equipment and training systems - is dictating the preference of European airline

And Boeing is in the unfortunate position, quite exceptional for the American giant, of missing the hus when the 250-seater airhus was in-troduced in the mid-1970s. It was caught napping without a brand new aircraft on its drawing boards. In a new book "Airhus ou ia Volonte Europeenne" ("Airhus or the Determination of Europe"), French aviation writer Jean-Pierre Quittard quotes a senior American executive of Airbus Industrie, George Warde. Warde says: "Even if the unconscicus impulse to buy American is as strong as ever in the United States, the attitude is changing towards European products. To-day, a U.S. conipany will buy the sircraft it considers best." This new trend has already been good news for the Airbus A300. It could bring even better tidings for its stable mate, the A310.

HAIFA. - The Halfs port spokesman on Friday rejected complaints made by "travel agents" concerning unsatisfactory service for passenger liners in the port. The unnamed agents reportedly warned that they would cut down the number of ships bringing tourists to Haifa if the ser vice did not improve.

The spokesmas, Yair Bar-Mashiah, told The Jerusalem Post that freighters were afforded priority at the quays, because building up cargoes to provide berths for. passenger ships would cost the economy millions.

But, whenever quay berths were available, especially in the summer months whes cargo turnover was low, the cruise liners were given the berths. When there were none they were tied up at the breakwater, and the passengers ferried ashore in launches, operated hy the Ogen company, which runs the launch concession in the port.

The regular passenger liners, which stayed only a few hours in port to disembark and embark paseengers, were alwaye gives berths, he stressed, and the cruise tourists were hardly inconvenienced by the short boat trip to and from the breakwatsr.

Shipping circles feel that one of the reasons for the agents' complaints' was that the launob service puts them to extra expense, and they would like to save the money. They eaid the agants thsmseives aggravated the problem by failing to ; etagger arrival of the cruise ships.

They dismissed the threat to cut down on the number of cruise liners, which this year has reached an all time high, noting that no other coun-try could offer the 'passengers' Jerusalem, the Galilee and the sun. all combined in a one to three day visit, which far outweighed the inconvenience of a launch service. won't pull out investments

Israel Discount Bank fund

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Post Finance Reporter

TEL AVIV. - Dan Telkowsky, managing director of the Discouot Bank investment Corporation (DBIC) yesterday dedied that he was cancelling future development plans Toikowsky bad reportedly announced the move in reaction to the government's decision to link development toans to industry. DBIC, a public company whose shares are traded on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange, is one of the country's largest investment companies. Its most recent balance sheet totalied ILS,600m.

The committee recommended that industrial icans should be linked while the currentiv practised system of grants be relained and it also called for an asteration of the tax regulations to and a tax on imsginsry profits, Tolkowsky said in an interview with The Isrusulem Post. He pointed out that the new loan structure would be a "blow" to capital intensive incustries.

We have not cancelled future expansion plans, but we are in the process of re-evaluating all lovestment and expansion plans," he added.

Telkewsky, in taking a broader view ci Israeli inoustrial development, over the next decade visualizes the need to tackla three basic, but controllable, problems.

One of these is the "disinclination of Israells io put in a day'e work." He is highly critical of the featherbedding practices in all sco-tors of the economy. "There is little doubt in my mind that the some 280, 000 strong labour force is capable of producing 30-40 per cent mors."

A second, and equally major problem is the quality of management. "The level of management must be raised and this certainly is a realizable goal," he stated.

Finaliy. Toikweky turned his attention to the problems of invest-ment in industry. In the 1960s it became clear that one could not go on and minimize the per capita investment in industry. In Israel the cspital investment per capita ie more than 40 per cent lower than in Western Europe. "In our country the output per worker is low and the added value is also low and the result is that wages are also low," he explained.

The situation has come to the point where industrial concerns are hav-ing a difficult time of finding workers to man the third shift. To Tolkowsky the finding of a solution to the above prohiems is critical. Discount Bank Investment has some 55 per cent of its total portfolio in-vested in industry.

BEIRUT (Rsuter). - Saudi Arabia's dollar-denominated foreign reserves stood at $160,000m. at the end of last year, a well-informed weekly newsictter said here yesterday. "An Nahar Arab Report and Memo" said the Saudis were irked by reports in the West that they were running short of cash. They believed press reports of a financial squeeze were intended to put pressure on them at next month's meeting in Genevs of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec), the newsletter added.

Saudi sources said the reports seemed to follow a similar line, alleging that Saudi Arabia was likely to swing towards those Opec states demanding a substantial increase in oil prices because of its financial position. They stated that it would need the inducement of higher prices to boost production to a level that would hridge the current shortage in world oil supplies of about 1.5 million harrels a day, the sources added.

The Saudis said the reports were fanciful and seriously distorted facts, especially about Saudi foreign reserves. The reported withdrawal last year of $5,800m. from the lon's reserves was essentially due to a change of accounting procedure, the sources said.

Shares rise strongly by as much as 5%

TEL AVIV. -- The share market surged ahead strongly as all sectors of trading registered sharp gains, in many cases up to 5 per cent.

Paradoxically enough, the upward action generated in the equities market did not neccessarily come at the expense of sales of index-linked bonds, which put in a mixed performance. Where losses were apparent, they were not more than 1 per cent. "Doubleoption" linked bonds turned in a winning performance, advancing by up to 2 per cent. Trading turnovers in bonds of IL112.8m. were unusually high.

Not a eingle share in the commercial banking sector was on the losing side. Mixrahi, in the wake of an announcement of an impending rights issue, was ahead by three points. Hapoalim and Leumi cach scored three-point gains. In the case of Hapoalim, initial de-mand for its ordinary shares was ILS.7m., while for Leumi it stood at ILS.9m. Much of the overall trading turnover came in the bank sector. IDB was one ahead while Union Bank gained 10 to 389. General Bank was one better while FIBI traded unchanged.

Mortgage bank issues were higher, with gains similar to those among commercial banks. General Mortgage was 10 better but Tefahot (b) kept up its torrid pace and gained 18 to 405. Ampal came through with a 25-point rise to 595.

Insurance shares continued to rebound. Securitas was the best performer in the group, gaining nearly 5 per cent to 361. Zur (r) rose by 14 to 344 but the hearer shares were unchanged. Motor House was "buyers only" and was raised by 19 points to 415. By terming these shares "speculative," in answer to a reader's letter we would like to point out that the implication is connected primarily with sharp gyrations in the price of otor House.

Land development and real estate issues were in sharp demand, and their prices mov-ed ahead accordingly. Most active in the group were the property and building shares. They gained 19 points to 461, reflecting a gain of 4.3 per cent. In recent years the company has shown a rapid growth in carnings as its income is either linked to the dollar or to the consumer price index.

Israel Land Development rose by about 4. per cent, but Azorim was the biggest percen-tage winner in the group with a jump of 5.6 per cent. The company'e "A" options were 9.4 per cent higher. Pri Or was the only share to decline, losing 41 points to an even 1000.

Oil Exploration of Paz was unchanged in active trading, but Naphtha was down by nearly 5 per cent. Lapidot (r) was "seller only." and the company's bearer shares lost 40 to 888

Industrials kept pace with the other sectors of trading. Electric Wire and Cables (r) gained 8.8 per cent. while its bearer shares rosc hy nearly 6 per cent. Phoenicia jumped by 28 points to 285 for an 8.8 per cent gain. Assis was sharply ahead, advancing by 36 to 587. Paper Mills, unaccountably, was down by 25 to 913. Polygon was also registered as buyers only Investment company chares were excellent market performers. Piryon was "buyers only." Elgar (b) and Ellern (r) each galloped ahead by 5.2 per cent. Amissar was 8.6 per cent higher.

UNIFIL stumbles badly

UNIFIL, the UN force despatched last year to Lebanon osten-slbly for the purpose of anlving a problem which the U.S. believed the Israel armed forces should not be permitted to solve, has become a problem in Itself.

UNIFIL was created in the wake of Israel's Litani campaign which was intended to clear a wide area of southern Lebanon of PLO terrorist bases.

When the U.S. refused to countenance the continued presence of Israeli forces in the area for that purpose, the posting of UN forces as a buffer was the compromise proposed to get Israel out.

There can be little question that UNIFIL bas not been up to the job. The main problem lies in the fact that it has permitted a sizeable infiltration of PLO terrorists back into bases in the area supposedly under its control.

The failure of UNIFIL derivee to a large extent from the fact that its parent body, the UN, and its executive agencies, the Security Council and the Secretary General, recognize the PLO as a legitimate party in the area and not as the very element reeponsible for the destabilization of Lebanon as a whole and of south Lebanon specifically.

This blas expresses itself in the orders issued to the UNIFIL forces and in the limitations put on their operational flexibility in those cases where local UNIFIL commanders would like to pursue their policing activities with vigour.

To this basic distortion in the UN's view of its dutiee must be added the pro-PLO bias of a number of the national contingents sent to Lebanon and of their commanders. The readiness to tolerate the presence of armed PLO terrorists in the areas under these contingents' control is an outgrowth of such a blas.

Not all the UNIFIL contingents, or their commanders, are equally susceptible to these biases. The latest case, in which a Nigerian colonel in the service of UNIFIL was caught smuggiing explosives into Israel for the use of Palestinian terrorists, does, however, constitute evidence that something serious is wrong.

Several months ago a Senegalese officer was caught in a similar attempt. The fact that both cases came to light by chance would seem to indicate that many other UNIFIL arms smugglers have actually delivered the murderous goods entrusted to their hands to terrorist contacts on the West Bank and in Jerusalem.

World opinion does not rank such smuggling attempts in the same category as Israeli reprisal attacks on PLO camps in Lebanon. The missing link in the world'e mind is the necessary translation of these smuggled explosives into terrorist bombings in buses, marketplaces and supermarkets throughout Israel which have claimed their toll in Israeli lives since the first Camp David agreement last September.

It is obvious that Israel cannot tolerate the continued involvement of UNIFIL personnel in such activities aimed at the lives of its citizens. Since the word of bonour of UNIFIL commanders to prevent the recurrence of such cases is apparently quite useless, Israel cannot act otherwise but to impose tighter restrictions on the entry of UNIFIL personnel.

The broader lesson to be learned is that like in the 1950s Israel should not be interested in UN buffers.

This lesson should be kept in mind in connection with the talks on extending the mandate of the UN forces separating Egypt and Israel in Sinal, in the light of the changing lines in Sinal. It is preferable that Egypt and Israel, with possibly the U.S., police those lines rather than the UN.

The government should aim its economic assistance at high-technology plants whose production is the result of research and development, writes MOSHE ARENS, MK.

THE GOVERNMENT'S decision to stop giving unlinked loans to industrial investors has attrred a debate on government policy in this area. What are the aims of government financial assistance to in-dustry? And in what form should the aid he given in order to achieve these aime?

In the past it was possible to justify indiscriminate government financial aid to any plant on the grounds that it created new employment opportunities. Today, bowever, it is clear that the cornerstone of government economic policy must be to achieve structural changes in the economy first and foremost in the industrial

The distortions that exiet in Israei's present industrial structure based primarily on unskilled, lahour-intensive activities (nowadays dependent iargely on Arab workers from the territories) and capital-intensive plants - are the direct result of indiscriminate financial aid in the past.

Assistance, specifically directed at plants using Israel'e advantage in talents and skills, is needed in future if the necessary structural changes are to be achieved within a reasonahie time. The encouragement of aliya, prevention of emigration, correction of the gigantic trade deficit and halting inflation - all these and, therefore, the very future of Israel, are linked to the rapid accomplishmant of these changes in the economy.

Once this is understood, it becomes clear that many plants deserve no government assistance: their economic and social contribution is marginal and possibly negative. On the other band, assistance to high-technology plants producing products thet are the result of local research and development ie in the best interests of the Israeli taxpayer who, after all, is paying the bill.

WILL MOST of the plant's production go to export? Are highly skilled workers, technicians, engineers and scientists a significant percentage of the plant'e labour force? Is at least 5 r cent of the plant'e turnover being invected in research and development? The answers to these questions should serve to establish

Israel's economic structure

who will receive government assistance in the future. At present, it is doubtful if even 10 per cent of Israeli Inductry can raspond positively to these questions. Of all the possible forms of govern-ment assistance to industry, the unlinked loan given at a time of gallop-ing inflation, seems the most unreasonable. The exact extent of the aid given is unknown and cannot be controlled as it depends on the rate of inflation in future years. The recipient joins that sector of the Israeli economy that benefits from increased inflation and will in the future show little enthusiasm for anti-inflationary measures. Since most of the loan will actually take the form of a gift, there is little incentive to build and manage the new plant in an efficient and businesslike manner. Just about everybody but the owner of the plant - the workers, the consumers and the taxpayers - will probably not benefit.

A basic criterion for determining the form of government assistance to industry must be that both the government and the investor bave a clear view of the extent of the ald: Each can then judge from his own viewpoint the profitability of the proposed venture. Unlinked loans do not pass this test. The government should provide grants (they should be linked if they are disbursed over a period of time) and ioans that are 100 per cent linked (not 70 or 80 per cent as suggested by come) to the cost-ofliving Index.

But industrial enterprises engaged in research and development only they chould be entitled to government assistance in the future - require another form of assistance.

The development of new products involves additional risks that do not appear in conventional industries. Whereas research and development activities have been shown to be generally profitable, not all such projects will be successful. This is the very nature of research and development.

In order to limit the extent of the risk involved in individual development projects the government must provide come insurance for the investments. This usually takes the form of government participation in the investments and government funding of come recearch and development activities. This form of government support has been given to intensive Israeli rescarch and development industries in the past few years. But it must be greatly ex-panded if the structural changes needed in the economy are to be brought about in the near future.

SO MUCH for the system of incentives to be established by the government in order to direct industrial investors into areee of activity preferred by the government. But the government is capable of acting much more directly and effectively.

Its involvement in the stete's economy ts unparalleled in any Western country. The government owns the largest companies and is also the largest eingle customer for goods and cervices. The degree of government involvement in the economy is expressed by the fact that its budget equals the entire gross national product. This effectively gives the government control of the country'e economy.

If it directs government companies to intensive research and levelopment activities, if it procures high technology products from Israeli industrial establishments, and if it ensures that architectengineering services for local pro-jects are not ordered abroad, then the desired structural changes in the economy will be accomplished. Otherwise, the present inefficient structure, leading to deficit, inflation and dependence, will be perpetuated. OF ALL government ministries, the

The continued development of this most important of Israel'e industrial sector is dependent on a radical change in the current aircraft procurement policy of the Defence Ministry.

In the past few years; this policy has been aimed at procuring new fighter aircraft from industry in the U.S. rather than in Israei, Orders for F15 and F18 aircraft (there ie

A refugee horror story

FOR A JEW and an Israeli to read of the dreadful fate befalling the ethnic Chinese minorities of former Indo-China who are fleeing or being expelled from their countries, is to relive the horrors of the 1930's and 1940's when a similar, albelt more allencompassing and eystematic genocide, was being practised against the Jews of Europe.

The similarities do not end there. The ethnic Chinese of the countries to the south of China have rightly been called the Jews of Southeast Asla. They have played the role of an ethnic minority of traders, more advanced than the indigennus host populations and also intensely hated by them. That hate has now reached genocidal intensity.

Today's ethnic Chinese of Vietnam and Cambodia also have nowhere in go after they succeed in extricating themselves from the hands of the murderous regimes which have taken control nf those countries. Their forefathers left a very different China generations ago, a China that is Itself exporting refugees to Hong Kong today and is in no mood or condition tn welcome returning ethnic kinfalk.

The Western world stands horrified by the cold-blooded determination of countries such as Thailand, Malaysla and Hong Kong to turn back the flood of refugees whn have survived the Pol Pot regime or the rigours of sea voyages which have so far claimed the lives of many tens of thousands of victims drowned in the South China Sea.

But the truth of the matter is that these countries are objectively the least cepable of solving the problem of these refugees. It is e problem of world-wide magnitude whose solution must be sought along two linee.

Most urgent of all is the application of massive pressure on Vietnam (Cambodia, so far gone in its inhumanity, is probably impervious to pressure) to slow the rate of the expulsion of its Chinese minority to one which can be coordinated with the prospects for their absorption elsewhere. It is essential that these people be saved fram the high likelihnod af drowning entailed in their being forced out to sea in leaky tubs before provisinn is made for their safe welcome eisewhere.

The queetion of their resettlement is one for an international refugee agency to deal with. The best colutions are not necessarily the ones of greatest proximity to overpopulated Southeast Asla.

Both the U.S. and France have taken in large numbers of indo-Chinese refugees since the beginning of the flight and expulsion from that region. Even Israel has taken twn token groups. But the magnitude of the problem is such as to require a determined international effort.

The UN's refugee effort has for long been bogged down in the political entanglements of the Paleetinian refugees, whose problem it is committed, under pressure from the Arab world, not to solve. It would be refreshing, for a change, if it devoted its cnergies to a real refugee problem that urgently requires the saving of tens if not hundreds of thousands of lives.

The result is that more and more merchant ships are being re-routed so as not to pass within 300 km of the Vietnamese coast. If you cannot actually see the people drowning, you have no obligation to pick them up. But they are still drowning.

As with the European Jews 40 years ago, the Chinese minority in refugees sheiter if other countries will accept all of them for eventual settlement. They have not done so. Malaysia's deputy prime minister

Vietnam are dying mainly because said last week, for example, that his country might as well shoot the refugees from Vietnam for all the sympathy it receives from the West in dealing with a desperate problem. Malayeia bad given temporary sheiter to over 40,000 hoat people on a tiny offshore island, but at least 12,000 more bave already been turned away by its navy. Most are probably now dead. And many who have landed face a Malaysian government expulsion threat.

With Thailand, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines all showing the seme recistance, the favourite refugee destination in the past few weeks has been Hongkong. There are now more than 40,000 refugees from Vietnam in this immensely overpopulated Britieb colony, of whom Britain itself has

There is no point in trying to reason with the Chinese-hating rulers of Hanoi. If Vietnam's Chinese are not to go on drowning at. the rate of over a thousand a day, ship-masters and the local countries must be assured that they are all gnaranteed eventual bomes elsewhere. America, France, Australia and Canada have already been comparatively generous, but they should be even more eo. Other European countries and Japan have not borne their share of the burden so far, nor have the more prosperous Latin American countries. As an urgent first step, the United Nations secretary-general's pies that the number of pledged places for 1979 be increased at once from 110,000 to 240,000 refugees should get an immediate respon Any country that does not at least double its present agreed quota is. condemning innocent people to death.
